

Los Angeles is known worldwide for its vibrant nightlife, incredible clubs, and trendy bars.

Now, thanks to Metro, you can connect with LA's afterhours scene simply by hopping on the Metro Red Line any time Thursday night through Sunday morning.

That's right. Any time.

Starting May 5th, 2008 (Cinco de Mayo, party peeps) the Red Line will run at all hours, all weekend, every weekend.

All you gotta do is pay the cover charge. We call it the Metro L8Nite Pass. Trains will run every half hour Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights after midnight. Buy a Metro L8Nite Pass from one of the Ticket Vending Machines for $8. After midnight, flash that puppy to one of our Metro Bouncers and you're free to ride until the sun comes up. Just like you party.

No more traffic, no more parking, no more designated driver. And all of LA's best nightlife at every stop. From the hipsterific Downtown bars to the trendsetting nightclubs of Hollywood, Metro will take you there.
